Immigration controls GOVERNMENT TRIES TO 'CON' THE PEOPLE

MAJOR
Deliberately hyping up his argument with EC ministers over rules of entry so as to give the impression to the British public that he is getting 'tough' over immigration

Refugee row with Europe designed to sidetrack attention from continuing flood

IN THE Daily Mail of Thursday, May 21st, there was a bold headline on the second page which read 'Migrants: Major won't surrender'. Similar headlines have been appearing in other papers over the past month or so – all of which might give the impression to the unsuspecting that the Prime Minister and his Government are at long last taking some firm action to stem the flood of West Indians, Asians and other Third Worlders into Britain. But anyone who is liable to be kidded by those headlines ought to read the small print underneath.

For the small print will say that all Major's 'no surrender' stance amounts to is a refusal to give in to demands by the European Community for the complete elimination of border controls between EC states. What the Eurocrats want is that the only controls in operation would be those affecting immigrants coming into the EC from outside – immigrants travelling from one EC country to another would, if the Eurocrats have their way, have completely free access.

What Major wants, according to media reports, is the retention of present national powers to control entry of all immigrants, whether they come from EC countries or not. On this our Premier seems to be digging his heels in. Hence the headline saying 'Migrants: Major won't surrender'.

But the reality of all this kerfuffle with the European Community is very different from what it seems. When John Major is heard arguing vehemently with EC bosses over this question of 'controls', what he is really doing is putting on an act for the benefit of the British voting public – an act designed to convey the impression that he is a 'tough' prime minister prepared to battle for British interests where immigration is concerned. The act is backed up by the Tory press, which has striven mightily to project just the same image of the Premier.

FRUITS OF MULTI-RACIALISM
A burnt-out bulding in Los Angeles following the recent riots there. This is what we have to look forward to in Britain if the multi-racial experiment is not ended soon!

FASTER THAN EVER

In fact the whole thing is a gigantic 'con'. Immigrants are now pouring into this country at a faster rate than ever. 267,000 entered legally in 1990, the latest year for which figures are available, and immigration officials estimate that another 100,000 a year are coming in illegally. The truth is that 'immigration controls' are a farce. How can a prime minister talk of 'controls' when immigrants, legal and illegal, are entering Britain at the rate of a million every three years?

And this figure, of course, excludes the huge numbers that are being added to the ethnic minority population yearly by means of its prolific birthrate, which is much higher than that of the indigenous British people.

If Mr. Major really wants to show that he's serious about controlling immigration, he'd better start by doing something

LOS ANGELES: WHAT ARE OUR MEDIA UP TO?

IF ONE THING stood out during and after the hideous Los Angeles race riots, it was the general attitude of one-sided sympathy for the rioters on the part of our mass media.

This was clearly shown in the handling on TV, radio and in the presss of the incident that provided the pretext for the vicious and homicidal rampage: the acquittal of four LA police officers on charges of assaulting Negro Rodney King.

The way the media told it, the policemen were sadistic brutes who beat up King practically for the hell of it. Meanwhile, anyone could have been forgiven for thinking, from the general tone of the reporting, that King was some sort of holy innocent, as pure as the driven snow.

No hint was given in the major headlines anywhere that there could have been more to the incident than this. Thus the jurymen and -women in the trial were presented by implication as 'prejudiced bigots' making a snap judgement on the basis of some sort of racial bias.

You had to turn to the inside pages of just one or two newspapers to get the full picture. The Sunday Telegraph's New York reporter Hugh Davies was one of the few newsmen who was good enough to flesh out the story with a few key facts largely ignored elsewhere, and set the record a bit straighter.

The truth is that Rodney King was an outsize thug with a prison record. The prosecution in the case carefully kept him off the witness stand — it seems they feared that his appearance there might quickly kill the contrived image of him as an innocent victim.

One of the key pieces of evidence in the trial was a hazy video-tape of what happened when King was pulled over by police officers whilst driving across town in his car with two passengers at 110 mph. Some 20 seconds of this tape have been played back over and over again on TV, both in the States and in Britain. This clipping shows officers apparently clubbing King.

What the media have by and large neglected to point out is that the tape lasts for some seven minutes. In fact the jury in the case spent a week examining the whole thing minutely, along with trial testimony, before arriving at a verdict.

Taken as a whole, the evidence crucially modifies the simplified tale favoured by our media hacks and their masters. It shows King's whole bearing to have been aggressive in the extreme.

One juror, explaining the verdict, said that King was "obviously a dangerous person, of massive size and threatening actions." He added that this was why police "used everything they had at their availability."

King turned out to have been drunk. But at the time the officers had no way of knowing that he was not on PCP, a drug that increases both the violence and the strength of anyone under its influence. King's movements also indicated to them that he might have been going for a gun.

Our media people must have known all this from the beginning. They also knew that Los Angeles is a city ridden with heavily armed drugs gangs. They don't see fit to explain how exactly police trying to work in such conditions are supposed to handle dangerous suspects.

Finally, our media people are fully aware that Los Angeles-style conditions are growing in our own cities. So what exactly is their game in reporting the LA riots in this way?

After LA riots, Whites take stock of America's multi-racial experiment

LIBERAL DREAM GOING UP IN FLAMES
Riot police stand guard in Los Angeles as city blazes

FOLLOWING the savage riots in Los Angeles, it's clear that times are changing for America's multi-racial experiment. It looks as if the former reactions of guilt and appeasement on the part of Whites towards Blacks that followed earlier outbreaks of riot, arson and murder in the 1960s and 1970s are being replaced by much more hard-nosed attitudes.

Two or three decades ago it seemed as if Whites, their brains pounded by the media with the idea that Blacks only rioted because they were getting a raw deal from white society, were ready to give those Blacks some benefit of the doubt.

Lavish schemes of welfare were introduced by municipal, state and federal governments. Reverse discrimination schemes, known in the US as 'Affirmative Action', were introduced to force employers to take on and promote black workers, even at the expense of better qualified Whites. Officially backed high-pressure pro-black and anti-white propaganda, designed to build up black morale (and crush that of Whites) with the idea that black failure in American society was somehow due to 'white oppression', became the norm. Black criminals got kid-glove treatment in the courts.

But at the end of what must have been the most concerted effort in history to boost the black man by deliberate public policy nothing seems to have changed. For all the output of effort on the Blacks' behalf, violent crime coming from the black ghettos has still gone on soaring to its present stupendous levels. Just the same unemployment among the Blacks has continued. Finally, the whole thing has come to a head in the most recent round of rioting, at least as bad as that of 25 years ago, which has left 60 or more dead and over a thousand injured and the centre of Los Angeles looking like a bombed-out war zone.

LIBERAL FAITH ON THE WANE

After all this, even some negrophile 'liberal' elements seem to be losing faith in their old quack cures. Says Guardian correspondent in the US Martin Walker: "Not only has the cash dribbled out of the urban aid programmes; so has the old liberal faith in their efficacy. The liberal consensus has been demoralised by the emergence of a welfare-dependent culture in the inner city, accompanied by the growth in black crime and drug abuse."

Walker's acknowledgement of the failure of liberal panaceas for the race problem provide an interesting insight as to the way in which one person's opinions can change when pitted against the ravages of time and experience, for it was this very same Martin Walker who in a book about British Nationalism and 'racism' published in 1977 said: "I despise nationalism, whether it be British, White Racist or Martian. I firmly believe that the human race in 5,000 or 50,000 years will be a uniform coffee-colour with a pleasing tinge of yellow, and I lustfully believe in accelerating the process..."

Walker's more recent view of things was echoed by Daily Telegraph correspondent Ambrose Evans-Pritchard, who foresees a future of racial confrontation across the United States. Even in the affluent 1980s, he says, when work was to be had almost for the asking, "There was no appreciable fall in the number of young black men without jobs. There seemed to be an irreducible core beyond the reach of economic opprtunity."

As for conditions in the ghettos, Evans-Pritchard, a one-time resident of Washington DC with pro-black sympathies, describes them as now approaching "urban guerilla warfare." Police, he says, are caught up in a "drug war, devoid of all chivalry, conducted by gangs armed with semi-automatic weapons."

WHITE BACKLASH

Amidst this brutal reality, American Whites, whose growing fear and anger are acknowledged by Walker as well, are now preparing for outright race war — even if politicians, other public figures and media verbalisers still pay lip service, though nowadays with much less conviction, to the worn-out and discredited claptrap of liberalism, 'equality' and 'integration'.

Evans-Pritchard summarised the situation:-

> "I fear that America is headed for a period of ugly race war, with vigilantes and tit-for-tat lynchings as in the Balkans or the Caucasus. The riots of the 1960s burnt themselves out because White America, consumed with guilt, was willing to shower the ghettos with money. But the mood has changed. There is white rage out there now, as well as black rage. Put bluntly, too many white people have been assaulted violently by young black men. Beyond the Washington beltway there is no longer any tolerance for liberal pleading for more welfare programmes. Americans know from their own experience that the failure of large parts of the black community to struggle up the ladder, as every other ethnic group has managed to do over time, is not due to the barriers of a racist society."

It may be that Americans will now at last start to think seriously about reverting to the ideas of their Civil War President Abraham Lincoln. The 'Great Emancipator', who put an end to negro slavery in the Old South, was equally eager, before his assassination in 1865, to see the Black Man repatriated to his ancestral homeland in Africa so as to spare the United States the kind of troubles Los Angeles has just suffered, and which he foresaw if Blacks remained on American soil.

There is much evidence that Britain's mult-racial experiment is headed the same way as America's.

We too could perhaps do well by taking a leaf out of Lincoln's book.

The mafia behind Britain's TV

EVER STOPPED to think who it is exactly that cooks up and serves up the stuff that comes out of your television screen?

A clue came just recently from a Mr. Mark Honigsbaum, writing in the London Evening Standard. According to him, a "new influence has taken over the levers of broadcasting" — though it is perhaps debatable whether that influence is necessarily quite as new as Mr. Honigsbaum would have us believe.

A Gang of Five, sometimes known to those in broadcasting with whom they're not so popular as the 'North London Mafia', seems now to have collared a number of television franchises and key positions right across the spectrum of TV channels. Seemingly, they are all big mates who play snooker with one another, attend one another's weddings and socialise on one another's yachts.

There's Michael Green, the "intensely private" boss of Carleton Television, who won the bidding for the Thames franchise. Then there's his close chum Michael Grade, the head of Channel Four ("with whom he (Green) shares an affinity for cigars") — and both are pally with Alan Yentob, the "bearded controller of BBC2" — a channel which, as BNP members and others will know, has an 'open-door' policy towards the expression of some shades of opinion but not others, despite the fact that all of us fund it through our licence fees.

TORIES' ADVERTISER

The fourth member of the cosy club is none other than Mr. Charles Saatchi, "the Conservative Party's favourite advertiser." Last but not necessarily least, there is Thames' controller of programmes, Mr. Green's former fellow pupil at swish Haberdashers Askes' public school David Elstein.

Together, commented Mr. Honigsbaum, these five men form "a powerful group who have a massive influence on what you will be watching on television today."

Of course, these gentlemen don't literally all come from North London — in the sense of living in Finchley, Golders Green, Hendon or some such suburb. At least some of their families originate quite a few thousand miles east of those places, and it would be strange if some of their hearts did not still lie in that direction.

But they do have another thing in common. It would naturally be libellous, even criminal, to suggest that this has anything to do with their present rise to positions of power greater than that of any elected public figure (as is merely a matter of observation, the media nowadays, especially TV, can practically make or break politicians and their fortunes, however prominent or senior they may be). Mr. Honigsbaum, as if anxious not to be seen equivoating over the matter, spells it out very clearly. "All five are Jewish," he says. Just so.

One friend of the five protested indignantly that "It's not a mafia but a grouping of brilliant television people whose interests happen to coincide with Michael Grade's."

ABDICATION!

Police failure to break up hippie camp is a national disgrace

A FEW YEARS AGO hardly anyone would have believed it could happen.

In a sleepy area of rural Britain the local populace has been stirred to anger and militancy, with vigilante groups being formed and many villagers walking about brandishing firearms.

This is what occurred in the Castlemorton district of Worcestershire last month when a 20,000-strong rabble of hippies, junkies, social security layabouts and downright criminals — in other words, a fair representation of the scum of the earth — descended on the area for a 'fun festival', during which they left behind them a trail of filth, damage to property and dead farm animals that will take many thousands of pounds to pay for.

This horde of human garbage, respectfully referred to by the news media as 'Travellers', unleashed itself upon the village without the locals ever being asked if they wanted its presence. For several days they did more or less as they liked, keeping up a constant pandemonium of jungle noise masquerading as 'music' which deprived residents of sleep. Many of them freely engaged in drug-dealing. Homes were burgled. Dogs belonging to the visitors killed sheep — one local farmer, Dermot Weaver, is facing ruin after having 30 lambs and ewes slaughtered. The common site was awash with rubbish and human excrement. One local pub was forced to close for the duration and lost about £7,000 of trade.

And all this time the police stood by and did precisely nothing to stop what was going on!

The decision of the heads of the West Mercia Constabulary not to intervene, despite urgent pleas by the locals that they should do so, was made on the grounds that they had inadequate manpower and did not want to cause a riot.

THE PRICE OF ORDER

This explanation simply is not acceptable.

No-one would suggest that the proper policing of such an event would be easy. It would impose a considerable strain on police resources. But that is what our police are for. If reinforcements had to be drafted in from neighbouring counties, so be it. This procedure does from time to time have to be adopted so as to maintain and law and order and protect the persons and property of law-abiding people.

But even this might well not have been necessary had the whole event been banned in the first place.

The Public Order Act gives the Home Secretary, acting on the recommendation of chief constables, the power to forbid assemblies in public places where there is reason to believe a threat to the public peace is likely. These very powers have been used, often with much less good reason, to ban political demonstrations and marches. Why were they not used on this occasion?

And if, in the absence of an advance ban, firm police action against the 'Travellers' had resulted in a riot situation that would simply have been a price which society must be ready to pay for the maintenance of the law. The alternative is abdication of the law — and that was what happened at Castlemorton last month. The law abdicated — not for the first time.

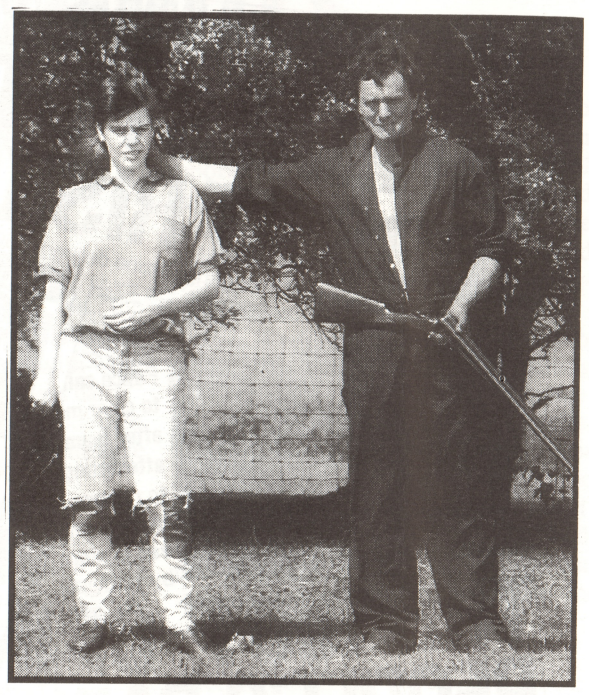

Police passivity and inaction in this case caused concern even to the Government — not notable for its toughness or resolution in the face of hooligans, as its handling of the inner-city riots of the eighties demonstrated. Home Office representatives were reported to have approached the West Mercia police to see why firmer action was not taken in this instance.

But the Government should not pass the buck. It has been precisely its own and its predecessors' timidity and gutlessness in the face of large and unruly mobs in the past that has created precedents that county police chiefs are apt to follow. Having set the rule that 'no-go areas' are to be tolerated in such places as Brixton, Toxteth and Londonderry, when the price of enforcing the law would have been that some people would get hurt, the Government should not be surprised, least of all dismayed, that local constabularies should model their own policies in accordance with its example.

There is also another precedent which should not be overlooked. When back in 1985 Wiltshire and Hampshire police took admirably tough action to remove a similar collection of undesirables from a site they had commandered down that way, the police were subsequently taken to court and ruled against for having used 'excessive force'. Needless to say, the West Mercia police had this example in mind when deciding how they would react to the situation in Castlemorton. The flabbiness and liberalism of the judiciary, as so often in Britain these days, tied the hands of law-enforcers and gave the green light to law-breakers.

None of this is to excuse totally the inaction of West Mercia police in this recent affair. But more than an indictment of them it is an indictment of British society in the late 20th century — a society that in the first place breeds legions of young parasites and degenerates of the kind that descended upon Castlemorton and, then lets them get away with the scale of public nuisance and lawlessness that occurred there because it seems incapable of establishing any firm authority that will protect people and property in such instances.

Castlemorton has shown what other events have shown again and again in the Britain of the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s — that law and order have collapsed because we do not have governments with the strength of will to uphold them.

YES, IT HAS COME TO THIS!
Castlemorton farmer Dermot Weaver, accompanied by his fiancée, stands guard with shotgun because the law would not offer him adequate protection. Mr. Weaver had 30 of his sheep killed by dogs let loose by the so-called 'Travellers'.

Are we entering the age of the vigilante?

WHEN the lorry-driver who killed 12-year-old Darren Owen in a hit-and-run incident laughed in their faces on receiving a derisory sentence of 12 months imprisonment, Darren's devastated parents were left feeling that it was not just their son's killer who had cocked a snook at them. They felt that the whole of Britain's legal system had let them down.

Driven to the edge of madness by grief and a gnawing outrage at the injustice, Darren's father, Stephen Owen, was moved to gun down the man who had taken his son's life. Private vengeance was the only means of redress he could see as being left to him.

When Mr. Owen finally came to trial late in May the jury felt that it would be grossly unjust to convict him given the circumstances of the case. A man of obvious good character with no previous record of violence, he walked free from the court.

Mr. Owen is in fact only the latest in a series of vigilantes who in recent years have taken the law into their own hands when they felt that evil was winning.

It will be recalled how eight years ago in New York Bernhard Goetz, who like many others had been brutally mugged more than once on the Subway, felt that someone had to stand up and be counted in the face of the nightmarish wave of crime engulfing the city and making life impossible for its decent inhabitants. Accosted yet again on a Subway train by a menacing gang of young black thugs demanding money, Mr. Goetz had made sure that this time he was carrying a gun. He didn't hesitate to use it against his would-be assailants.

NOT GUILTY! Stephen Owen, seen here after being cleared by the court*

What was noticeable, as in Stephen Owen's more recent case here in Britain, was the wave of sympathy that met Mr. Goetz's action. For years, New Yorkers had felt that the streets and subways of their town had been gutlessly surrendered by those in power to the vicious scum of the under-class. Now they didn't hesitate to applaud what Goetz had done.

REACTION OF HORROR

Of course, all this is without a doubt deplorable. Writing in The Sun in response to Mr. Owen's acquittal, some of the great and the good expressed their horror. Retired Judge James Pickles condemned vigilantism, saying: "We're not in the Wild West." Former Assistant Chief Constable for Greater Manchester John Stalker took the line that jungle law must never triumph. Anarchy, he said, would result if vigilantism were not suppressed.

But if these gentlemen really want to solve the problem they are missing the point here. We are already a good bit too close to the Wild West for comfort. The jungle has already been allowed to

How financial spivs are ripping off Britain

IN THESE TIMES of recession when Britain is flat on its backside, businesses are going bust right and left, British workers are being laid off — with unemployment moving towards 3 million and likely to stay that way for a decade, according to the National Institute of Economic & Social Research — and many thousands of British householders being dispossessed of their homes, it appears that certain individuals are being singled out for special protection.

Among these are the proprietors of the Canadian-based property empire, Olympia & York, which has come unstuck in Britain over its massive speculative investment in Canary Wharf, the gigantic multi-storey white elephant disfiguring London's dockland. The Reichmann brothers took out vast bank credits to finance this monstrosity.

But now there are hardly any takers for the huge office space. This means, in a nutshell, that Messrs. Reichmann can't pay their debts. In fact, O. & Y. is bankrupt to the tune of billions internationally. Into Canary Wharf alone the banks have ploughed £1.15 billion.

Right at this moment, small businesses in Britain are getting no mercy from the high street banks to whom they are in debt — any more than are home-owners who can't meet their mortgage commitments. In fact the banks have been on the receiving end of a great deal of criticism over this.

SPECIAL LIFELINE

The Reichmanns, however, were given a special lifeline in mid-May which was to last to the end of the month. £1 million a day was to be extended to keep Canary Wharf afloat. This was ostensibly done as part of a special package agreed by eleven banks in order to stave off the evil day of Olympia & York's final ruination — which would amount to the biggest corporate collapse in history.

Towards the end of the month, however, Canary Wharf seemed on the point of going into receivership anyway.

The justification for keeping the Reichmann's major enterprise in Britain staggering on like this was that their friendly bankers had sunk so much into it, and their losses in the event of a collapse would be so large, that their whole cash-flow position might become critically strained. In recent years the banking system has in fact already been involved in stupendous losses, even without the O. & Y. fiasco. Billions have been poured down a rat-hole in the form of loans to Afro-Asian banana republics, which have naturally shown themselves incapable of repaying them. This has been a major factor in our own recession. Losses of this kind have to be made good by increased interest rates and banking charges back in Britain and the other creditor countries, with ensuing unemployment and home repossessions, if the banks are to be able to continue meeting their obligations to their creditors and clients.

In addition, during the binge of irresponsible and uncontrolled speculation deliberately encouraged by the Tory Government in the 1980s, banks in Britain poured out credit to all sorts of dodgy customers in the quest for a 'fast buck', as if there had been no tomorrow. One of the latter was of course Mr. Robert Maxwell (alias Du Maurier, alias Hoch), the son of a horse-thief from Slovakia, who spent his life spinning self-glorifying public fantasies about himself.

Unfortunately (and, some would say, strangely) Maxwell found, not just one, but a quite a number of listening banks willing to swallow his yarns. In the upshot, when he quit this life recently he bequeathed a legacy of no less than £1.25 billion in bad debt to burden the banking system and its unfortunate debtors.

GUINNESS CONVICT

On the subject of shady characters, it now appears that none other than Guinness convict Gerald Ronson is also in a pickle over property speculation. His Heron Corporation owes £1.5 billion. He is trying to persuade banks and bondholders to hold off awhile until he can straighten out the mess by selling off Heron Properties. It is thought likely that Mr. Ronson too will enjoy special forebearance. Meanwhile, here also it is likely that the 'small fry' — ordinary British businessmen and home-owners — will have to subsidise the banks' losses as they hold off from big debtors like Ronson.

The scandal of the whole business is that, as we have pointed out before, none of the speculative activities of the Reichmanns, Maxwells and Ronsons are in the slightest bit nationally or socially useful. They make parasitical megabucks for the chosen few, whilst ending up imposing appalling burdens on the working and producing many.

REFORMS NEEDED

Strict reforms are required in the operation of our financial machinery. Just to begin with, foreigners like the Reichmanns (Jewish 'refugees' from Central Europe who fled overseas to escape the Nazis) should be prevented altogether from investing in our economy — many of their activities being located abroad and by their nature beyond the control of anyone in this country.

Meanwhile, here at home the banks should be required to finance industry, agriculture and productive services — and in all but a few exceptional cases in Britain itself. Finance

THE NEWS THE NATIONAL PRESS DIDN'T PRINT

This is a selection of headlines from the Halifax local paper, the* Courier. *Note the one in the top left-hand corner which acknowledges that Whites are victims of racial attacks in the town. It is rare that any newspaper, local or national, is prepared to report things with such frankness. Almost nothing of these attacks ever got into the national papers or was mentioned on national TV news reports.

AT ONE TIME it would have been a matter of national concern.

Vicious, unprovoked assaults on local men and women become a regular event. A whole neighbourhood in a provincial Northern English industrial town is terrorised by gangs. The district is being described as a no-go area.

But today most of the nation knows nothing about it. Now it seems to be a case of 'Hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil' — and above all don't talk about it! The only way to get any idea that this kind of thing is happening is to read the town's local paper.

Why should this be so? What's so special about the case in point?

Well, in case it's of any relevance, the town is Halifax, Yorkshire. The district is full of immigrants. The victims have obviously British names and seem to be all white; and, as the local evening newspaper, the Courier, is just about ready to concede, in however mealy-mouthed a way through its editorial and correspondence columns (though not in its news reports of repeated incidents, where identification of attackers by race is avoided) — the culprits are Asians.

As it happened, the latest wave of violence to have hit the Victoria Road area of Halifax took place in early April — coinciding very closely with the general election campaign, in which Mr. Major, in complicity with the Labour and Liberal Democrat parties, contrived to suppress almost all mention of the race issue.

VICIOUS ASSAULTS

One young white man, Mr. Christopher Clarke, a local resident, was attacked in broad daylight by a gang of youths as he walked home from work, and was put in hospital after a bad beating. Another, Mr. Shaun Henderson, said he had undergone a number of ugly experiences, including being spat upon and having a milk bottle thrown at him.

In both cases the attackers were Asians. These are only two incidents in a long series.

At the beginning of April, a commital hearing took place before Calder Magistrates involving another attack some time previously on another man, Mr. Gary Ives, in Hopwood Lane, Halifax. Mr. Ives was left battered and bleeding after encountering two groups of Asian youths outside a nightclub. A former workmate of Mr. Ives, Tariq Mahmood, of Gibbet Street, right at the heart of the troubled area, was accused of taking part in the assault and committed for trial to Leeds Crown Court after being remanded on conditional bail, charged with using or threatening violence.

Women, too, have not been spared. Mr. Henderson's girlfriend, Miss Adele Pearce, had been grabbed by the throat when she tried to stop a 20-strong gang punching and kicking a man lying helpless on the ground. Women in the area, said Mr. Henderson, were regularly subjected to crude sexual abuse. Mr. Clarke verified this, saying that his own girlfriend had repeatedly been the victim of obscene taunts.

In another incident, Gillian Holdcroft received what the local paper described as "horrific facial injuries" when she was attacked by thugs while travelling on a bus through the Gibbet Street area. In the same report it was stated that "Bus drivers yesterday threatened to boycott the area after the latest attack increased safety fears both for themselves and their passengers."

VIOLENCE ORGANISED

What is more, the violence appears to be quite highly organised. Mr. Clarke, who said that along with other residents he had been repeatedly threatened ever since moving to the neighbourhood before Christmas, remarked that the youths seemed to have an underground network and appeared in large numbers whenever there was any hint of trouble. "It's turning into a no-go area, and people are afraid to go out," he said.

The mayhem has also now extended to hooliganism and riot. A team called out to recover a van which had been driven round a local park, destroying lawns and flower beds and then burnt out, came under a hail of bricks and bottles from gangs of youths when it arrived on the scene. Police had to be called to disperse the mob.

The incident followed a spate of vandaliam against vehicles in the Gibbet Street district. Residents' cars have been one target, a number having been turned over and otherwise damaged. Disabled pensioner Mr. Robert Moran had his car damaged three times in a week. Shortly afterwards police had to be summoned when a group of youths stoned a bus travelling through the area.

DELIVERY VANS ATTACKED

Delivery vans supplying local businesses have likewise come under attack. So bad has the problem become that one firm's managing director, Mr. Peter Bottomley, who has even threatened to withhold his business community charge in protest at what he sees as inaction by the authorities, has warned that if as a result his suppliers refuse to deliver he might even be forced to close his factory, with the loss of jobs that that would entail. He has already had to fortify his premises at great expense. "I'm having to make my building into a prison to protect it from these mindless people," said Mr. Bottomley.

His fears seem well-founded following the near firing of an engineering factory in neighbouring Sovereign Street when car thieves torched a vehicle they had stolen right next to the walls of the building. This was only the latest in a spate of crimes, including break-ins and thefts of valuable equipment, to hit the premises.

But Labour councillor Mohammed Najib is dismissive of the area's problems. Whilst claiming to sympathise with the local businessmen and others who have been hit, he recently contented himself with saying that "this sort of thing is happening all over." According to Mr. Najib, things in the area are currently "better than they were." This has come as a surprise to many Halifax residents living in the midst of the mayhem. It may also surprise many other British folk learning of the current crop of problems for the first time.

The nature of all this violence has become so well known to the people of Halifax that the local newspaper, the Courier, has not even attempted to hide it. In an astonishingly frank article appearing recently headed 'Race attacks on Whites', local reporter Martin Bentham stated that "All the racial attacks in the town so far this year have been on Whites."

In fact, this ongoing state of race war that is taking place in Halifax ought properly to be the focus of attention on the part of the national news media, and not just of the local Halifax paper. And Halifax is not alone — similar things are happening in a great many localities throughout Britain where the multi-racial experiment has been attempted by the importation of large numbers of ethnic minorities. We are constantly getting reports of large-scale racial trouble from local papers which have been almost completely hushed up by the national press and television.

None of this is to suggest that all the fault for what is going on lies with the ethnic minorities; some Whites are responsible too. What it does indicate, however, that wherever the attempt is made to make totally different races live together, cheek-by-jowl, in the same neighbourhoods trouble almost always results. Recent news from America confirms that this is the same all over the world.

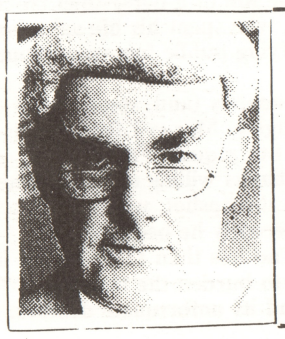

The politicians will not admit it, but there is only one way to stop this race war, and that is the wholesale repatriation of the ethnic minorities in this country.

2. Race industry tries to gag British judges

AS PART of the big cover-up on the effects of immigration and multi-racialism, the Government and Government-financed 'race relations industry' have been showing marked intolerance towards officials who make revelations which reflect unfavourably on their policy. An example of this was the treatment a short time back of Assistant Recorder David Spens following remarks he passed in the trial of a Nigerian woman for credit card fraud at Middlesex Crown Court.

Mr. Spens had merely said that this type of crime was "far too prevalent among the Nigerian community."

Straightaway the mischief-making legal agitprop outfit, the Society for Black Lawyers, complained to Lord Chancellor Lord Mackay, who obediently snapped to attention and ordered that Mr. Spens be reprimanded.

JUDGE PICKLES Outraged by reprimand of colleague for speaking the truth

This produced a swift rejoinder from retired Judge James Pickles, writing in The Sun newspaper. Outraged Judge Pickles spelled out just what Britain has now been reduced to. "A white person," he commented, "who makes remarks that coloured people do not care for is stamped on by the authorities. But coloured people can say whatever they like without fear of rebuke."

Of the case of Mr. Spens he said: "No-one asked whether the remark was true. That doesn't come into it. Truth is no defence."

If even our judges are no longer to be allowed freely to spell out the truth, as they see it, in their own courts then the question naturally arises as to where that leaves the rest of us. Evidently, all us Britons are henceforth to be condemned to silent acceptance of anything and everything that outsiders wish to impose on us — or that is imposed on us in their name in our own land — even when every bone in our bodies tells us that we and our country are being subjected to intolerable abuse. In other words, we are going to be forced — all of us — on pain of God knows what penalties, to live a lie.

Judge Pickles added that the High Court judge by whom David Spens was to be ticked off would do the ticking "knowing which side his bread was buttered." To put it another way, the whole atmosphere of Britain's legal establishment is now at the beck and call of the 'anti-racist' brigade.

Under whose rule has this state of affairs come about?

Why, under that of Thatcher, Major and the Tory Party, that's who.

In the case in question, deathly silence followed the incident. Not a peep came from Government circles, and Tory MPs were, to a man and a woman, as silent as mice.

ACE COVER-UP

3. Other incidents played down

DID KILLING HAVE A RACIAL MOTIVE?
On left: Victim Raymond Kelly; In centre and on right: killers Jamil Chowdhary and Mohammed Nazir

OTHER CRIMES involving immigrant culprits are also being played down by the media. Anyone might have thought that the cold-blooded shooting of a boy in the back by two robbers — all for the sake of just £70 — merited front-page treatment at least somewhere.

Instead, what was described at Winchester Crown Court by Mr. Justice Phillips, in jailing Jamil Chowdhary and Mohammed Nazir for life, as the "brutal, senseless and horrifying murder" of 17-year-old Raymond Kelly during a raid on a service station in the village of Hartley Wintney, Hants., just over a year ago has been kept well hidden from the British public.

Chowdhary, who was described by the judge as having "the sexual morality of a tom cat," was desperate to support his Casanova life-style. When his taxi business ran into the red he opted for robbery as a means of paying for it.

He and Nazir hit the Phoenix Green filling station one evening when Raymond was there by chance chatting to his friend Matthew Pollock and a girl cashier.

The two thugs ordered the lads at the point of a sawn-off shotgun to kneel down with their foreheads on the ground. Raymond was then blasted in the back at point-blank range with what the judge described as "ruthless calm" by Chowdhary and Nazir, who then made their getaway with their meagre haul from the cash till.

Nazir was the first of the duo to be arrested, and it was only the fact that Chowdhary couldn't keep his fingers off his partner's girlfriend that led to his capture. In revenge, Nazir spilt the beans about Chowdhary's being his accomplice.

After the jailing of the two, Matthew Pollock, who described the vicious killing of his friend in court testimony, said: "I don't think a life sentence is enough. I think they should be kept inside forever — or ideally they should both be hanged. Prison for life is just too soft for what they did." He added that he could never forgive the murderers.

Raymond's grief-stricken parents posed the question: "Why did they have to kill him? He did what he was told and was no threat to them. We will never understand why he had to be shot dead."

Police have expressed similar bafflement.

All suggestion is meanwhile being avoided, whether in the press — which has relegated the teenager's killing to the inside pages, where it has been reported at all, or anywhere else — of any possible racial motivation behind such callous savagery, despite the Asian background of Chowdhary and Nazir, both from the Reading immigrant community.

This is oddly different from the way in which incidents such as the killing of Nego Rolan Adams in Thamesmead, South London, by white youths, have been treated. The media, in this case, have tumbled over themselves to make out that this was a 'racist' murder, despite statements from both police and trial prosecution counsel that there is not a shred of evidence for such a theory.

PRODUCTS OF MULTI-RACIAL NEW ORDER

Meanwhile, there are other incidents taking place up and down the country that do not reflect too well on the direction in which Britain's multi-racial new order is heading — incidents which the press and other news media are also going out of their way to play down.

Sheffield policewoman Karen Bean was attacked by a mob of mainly Asian thugs when she went to answer what turned out to be a hoax call in the city's Abbeydale district. The burly leader of the gang punched her in the face when she bravely confronted him. His cronies then queued up to kick her. To escape from this calculated ambush WPC Bean had to beg refuge from a nearby householder.

This unpleasant incident, too, was kept to the inside pages of the papers, if reported at all. Almost nowhere was any mention made of the race of the attackers.

Anyone would think, from the degree of silence that greets some of the outrages that ordinary Brits suffer, that in the eyes of the media they no longer really matter in their own country. On the other hand, should any case emerge in which non-Whites are assaulted by Whites we can be sure that the media will be wailing loudly about the alleged increase in 'racial attacks'.

COURT SLAP ON THE WRIST

Another case highlighting the lack of concern of authorities for the fate of native Britons occurred in Glasgow recently. Here three Asians walked free from the High Court after a hearing in connection with the killing with hockey sticks of a young white man, Hugh McCallum. Khalid Khan's plea of not guilty to murder was accepted, while Azeem Nazie and Liaquat Ali had sentence deferred for a year after admitting causing Mr. McCallum's death.

Judge Lord Cowie released the three after hearing that it was a 'freak blow' that killed the young man. He also took account of what were described as "very favourable" social enquiry reports on the accused.

Not least, the judge seems to have been impressed with the claim that Mr. McCallum had earlier made 'racist' taunts at his assailants, which had provoked them. Nazie's solicitor, Mr. Joseph Beltrami, exulted over the result, saying that he hoped it would "discourage others from using racist taunts."

But Mr. McCallum's family, who were present at the hearing, did not agree. Their explosion of anger in the court, almost leading to a clash with supporters of the accused, seemed to indicate that they did not go along with Mr. Beltrami's reported opinions, or with the notion that such considerations as he and Lord Cowie brought forward in any way excused the killing of their son.

If the authorities in Britain continue along these lines they can expect to stir up a great deal more anger of the same kind in the future.

4. AIDS and race: the criminal conspiracy of silence

CONCERN has grown of late that the AIDS plague may be starting to get out among the general population in a serious way after having so far been limited mainly to queers and junkies.

But the Government has done its damnedest to cover up the true source of the new heterosexual AIDS scourge. In particular, it has failed to tell the public of its mainly 'Third World', especially African, origins.

Official publicity campaigns have made much of the risk to sexually normal people from the hideous and deadly disease. The National AIDS Trust, too, says that surveys show an increase in the number of pregnant women and babies who are HIV positive, and that this means the level of infection is on the up and up among the population at large,

But it has been left to a group of doctors at London hospitals to pinpoint the connection between AIDS and race that the Govern-ment and such well-funded bodies as the Trust seem eager to skirt around.

'POLITICAL REFUGEES'

Doctors at Guy's Hospital, Southwark — a London borough now being swamped with African immigrants — have just reported in the medical magazine Lancet that seven out of eleven women found to be infected had been allowed into Britain as 'political refugees' from Uganda.

Doctors at St. Stephen's Clinic, West London, discovered that 60 per-cent of HIV positive patients had not been born in Britain. These were thought to have been infected overseas and to have brought the disease with them into this country.

At Charing Cross Hospital no less than half of all new heterosexual AIDS cases last year were immigrants from Africa.

Meanwhile, doctors at St. Thomas's found that, whilst more than 50 per-cent of heterosexual HIV cases were drug abusers who had injected themselves using dirty needles, most others had caught the virus through sexual contact with a partner abroad.

What was not spelt out in official statistics was that nearly all the 39 patients classified in this way were once again Africans who had been allowed into Britain very recently. The figures were presented in such a way as to hide these facts.

CONCENTRATION ON ETHNIC MINORITIES URGED

Responsible and qualified medical personnel in Britain involved directly with the treatment of AIDS now frankly state that prevention campaigns should concentrate on ethnic minorities. They also want details published of the spread of the disease in different countries.

But all this runs counter to official policy.

Common sense says that the AIDS factor ought to be sufficient cause on its own, even if there were no other, for halting all 'Third World' immigration right now. Just one infected newcomer slipping into Britain would be quite enough to let loose wide-spread infection, let alone the many that we now have.

The same common sense says that the AIDS factor on its own ought to be sufficient justification for reviewing the continued presence in Britain of the vast numbers of immigrants already here.

But, as is obvious, common sense is not being allowed to prevail. Only a few years ago, the Government ran scared when accused of 'racism' over a timid official suggestion that it might be a good idea to screen all new arrivals from Africa for the HIV virus.

THIRD WORLDERS CONTINUING TO SWARM IN

As a result, Africans, along with vast multitudes of other 'Third Worlders', have gone on swarming into Britain without let or hindrance. And matters are likely to get much worse if under present EC arrangements the last of our border controls disappear — opening Britain, along with the rest of Europe, to an unprecedented floodtide from Africa and Asia. Our present rulers, despite their current phony argument with the EC over national border controls, have shown by their record that they are not likely to do anything effective to stop these developments. Least of all are they likely, in view of their mania for promoting multi-racialism, to do anything to prevent sexual contact between native Britons and alien immigrants already here who might carry the HIV virus.

Even now, when the growing AIDS menace should serve to make clearer than ever before that 'Third World' immigration and mullti-racialism are nothing less than madness, the Government shows no sign of having what it takes to change tack.

If we, the British people, allow this criminal irresponsibility and gutlessness in high places to go on, it may yet be the death of us — literally!

WORLD'S BIGGEST SOURCE OF A.I.D.S.
Among Africa's hundreds of millions the AIDS disease is rife, and huge numbers of them — including many heterosexuals — are dying of it every year. Yet the Government will not be honest about the AIDS threat to this country from African immigrants — for fear of being accused of 'racism'.

ELECTIONS: THE NEXT TARGET

THE general election might be over, but the contesting of elections will continue to feature prominently in the British National Party's programme of activities. Local council by-elections will be contested vigorously by units up and down Britain. Furthermore, it has been decided that the time is ripe for the BNP to begin regularly contesting parliamentary by-elections. We won't fight the first such election that comes up just for the sake of it, but when one emerges in a suitable area we shall be swinging into action. Our experiences in the general election have shown us that for the first time in more than ten years nationalists can fight such elections and gain creditable results.

The likelihood is that the next general election will not be for at least another four years. This allows us to plan ahead. The next major electoral test for our activists to focus upon are the county council elections which will take place in May 1993 (No elections will take place then in Scotland nor the English metropolitan counties). At this early stage we can say that BNP candidates will possibly stand in Lancashire, North Yorkshire, Kent, Essex, Hertfordshire, Berkshire, Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire, Derbyshire, Cleveland, Cambridgeshire, Devon, Avon, Staffordshire and South Glamorgan. In many places here the BNP will be cutting new ground, and for many units this will be their first electoral outing. The experience gained by these units will be invaluable for the future.

The watchword for these campaigns is concentration. Single wards must be targeted by units that wish to contest the county council elections. All temptations to fight extra seats in the same areas will have to be resisted strongly.

These wards must be targeted in the very near future and vigorous campaigns in them must be begun as soon as possible — the year will pass quickly. All the doors in each ward will have to be canvassed over the next year and solid support bases built up by campaigning on local issues in a way similar to the highly successful 'Rights for Whites' campaigns that the party has mounted in London, particularly the East End. Our aim must be to maximise our local impact, for we know that until such time as the BNP has grown to be a truly mass movement this is the only way to achieve good results in elections. A combination of good results will help to boost the BNP by enhancing its credibility, and so contribute to the building of the mass movement it must become.

As only single wards will be contested in next year's county council elections, our units will have plenty of time this year to engage in more wide-ranging recruitment activities within their regions. New units of the party are forming all the time, and the party's leaflets are attracting enquiries at an unprecedented level. We must capitalise upon this great public interest in the party to build our organisation in areas where we are as yet sparsely represented. Over the next year, by intelligently contesting a variety of elections as they come up, and by solidly working to establish ourselves in our target seats, we will be able to entrench ourselves strongly in many new areas. Make sure you do your bit to bring this about!

BNP campaign against Hong Kong influx

The British National Party's campaign against Barnard Marcus Estate Agents continued in South London in South London with a highly successful picket of a branch of the company in Mitcham on saturday, the 30th May. Hundreds of special leaflets were handed out to eager shoppers exposing the Barnard Marcus sell-out.

Barnard Marcus have been advertising in Hong Kong to encourage the Chinese of the colony, who will shortly be coming to Britain, to buy houses through them.

Thousands of hard-working British families face eviction, with their properties being repossessed, as they have fallen behind on their mortgage repayments due to the recession the Tory Government has fostered in this country. Barnard Marcus are taking advantage of this situation by trying to fill these cheaply obtained properties with Hong Kong Chinese.

The BNP's message in its campaign is simple: 'Boycott Barnard Marcus!'. Croydon branch of the BNP is to be applauded for launching this campaign, which has already created great interest in the party in the London boroughs of Croydon, Sutton and Merton.

ARE WE ENTERING THE AGE OF THE VIGILANTE?

encroach too far. Vigilantism is if anything a symptom of the anarchy that is already with us, rather than a cause.

More realistically, retired Old Bailey Judge Michael Argyle openly acknowledged that the criminal justice system is simply failing people. Under these conditions, he made it plain that he could sympathise with vigilantes. "I'm not saying it's correct," he commented, "but I can understand someone who has suffered taking the law into their own hands."

Judge Argyle concluded that "until we get harsher sentences, more and more people are going to resort to violence to ensure fair punishment for a crime." Exactly. In modern times the tendency has been in the direction of pussyfooting and appeasement towards the thug, the criminal and the terrorist. It is obvious by now what sort of future this must make for, if Mr. Argyle is right.

DEATH PENALTY ADMINISTERED BY OTHER MEANS

Mr. Stalker is all for society cracking down on those who kill in revenge. But he of all people should know, just for a start, that if the death penalty for vicious killers is thrown out through the front door it will get in again through the back window. He was the senior policeman sent to Ulster to investigate the allegation that the Royal Ulster Constabulary was operating an unofficial 'shoot-to-kill' policy against terrorists in the province whom Westminster's feeble official policies were leaving alive and at liberty to cary on their dirty work. In these circumstances it was his own brother police officers who felt that if anything was to be done by way of effectively removing these killers from the scene they would have to do it themselves.

To be sure, it is very wrong that anyone, let alone a policeman, should act like this. But it is even more wrong that there should be a state of society in which people feel they have no alternative if there is to be any effective sanction at all against evil-doers.

On present showing, private vigilantism, backed up by a sympathetic public opinion, would seem to be the thing of the future. The only sure way of forestalling its growth is to get back to an order of things in state and society under which those in power will act resolutely to make sure that degenerates and delinquents of all kinds are given their just deserts. Only in a climate of effective justice against the scum of society will it be possible to eliminate the urge to private revenge.

THE MAFIA BEHIND BRITAIN'S T.V.

Of course.

All the same, many people may feel that we are looking here at a minority interest which, given the power of TV — the greatest mind-bender of the 20th century — should properly, under our supposed 'democratic' conditions, be dethroned from its present position for the benefit of the great British majority.

What do you think?

HOW FINANCIAL SPIVS ARE RIPPING OFF BRITAIN

purely for speculative gain, whether in property or anything else, should be prevented — if necessary by law.

In a proper economic system finance should be the handmaiden to the productive and useful sectors of the national economy. It should not be a freebooting, rip-off operation in its own right. It should exist to build up this country's economic strength. The banker or money-man must justify his reward in terms of the service he renders to the national interest, with the productive worker, whether hand or by brain, put first.

GOVERNMENT TRIES TO 'CON' THE PEOPLE

to stop this flood — the flood that is threatening to overwhelm us and dispossess us of our own country, whether it comes in via the airports or via the maternity wards of our hospitals. That is where the real danger lies, and that is where Mr. Major and his Government are doing precisely nothing!

Major and the Tories desperately needed to kid some of the British public they were acting tough on immigration in order to garner votes at the recent general election. They are also dead scared of a rise in votes for what they term the 'extreme right' — i.e. some political party, like the British National Party, which is genuinely pledged to do something to stop immigration and restore Britain to the British people.

In the election in April they just managed to stave off a big breakthrough for nationalist parties like the BNP, though the latter greatly increased its vote by comparison with past performances. But reality is catching up on Major & Co. They are not likely to be able to get away with the 'con-trick' they have been pulling on the British people for much longer. The desperate noises they're now making in their phony row with Europe shows that they're running out of time!

RACE INDUSTRY TRIES TO GAG BRITISH JUDGES

The reprimand of Mr. Spens followed comments some weeks earlier in a case being heard before Marylebone Magistrates' Court by senior Justice Sir Bryan Roberts involving telephone fraud in which the defendant was a Moroccan woman. Said Sir Bryan: "Day by day in these courts there are people from foreign countries who settle here, don't gain employment and just live off the taxpayer."

Chambermaid Asman Tuijri, accused of fiddling a phone call to her mother in Morocco, had an unemployed husband. The family received £75 a week income support. Sir Bryan exclaimed: "They all live off the state."

He added frankly that he was appalled by the number of immigrants appearing in front of him, and that he was thinking of jailing other foreigners who appeared before him on theft charges. "They not only begin to swindle the state and shops but the telephone system as well. People who come to this country and commit criminal offences are liable to be deported because they are abusing our hospitality."

The court heard how a defendant had been shown by a friend a way of using the same coin to add credits on a payphone. Sir Bryan said: "They queue up to do it, each a disciple of their predecessor."

Many long-suffering Britons will feel that Sir Bryan said things that sorely needed saying. But our rulers seem to think otherwise. Perhaps the knuckle-rapping of Mr. Spens was an effort to put the kybosh on judicial forthrightness of this kind.

BNP stands up for Whites in Camden

OVER the last few years the Regents Park and Somers Town districts on either side of Euston Station in the borough of Camden have witnessed some of the worst racial incidents in London. These once overwhelmingly white working class areas have been steadily encroached upon by an ever-increasing wave of immigrants, mostly Bangladeshis. Large gangs of Bangladeshis have taken to roaming the area, and a number of Whites have been viciously attacked. The response of the left-wing Camden Council has been to speed up the influx of immigrants and victimise the white community. Meanwhile the British National Party has quietly built up a core of support on the estates.

This situation came to a head on the 28th April, when six Bangladeshis were arrested after some white residents were attacked.

Predictably, the 'Anti-Racist Alliance' and all the other fringes of left-wing groups blamed the Whites and the police for this incident and called a protest march for Sunday, the 17th May. The message they were giving out was simple: the Whites must lie down and watch their estates being taken away from them.

However, things did not work out so nicely for these red agitators, for the BNP was called in to assist in the defence of the white community!

At short notice, a special 'Rights for Whites' leaflet was distributed all over the area. Its message was: ''Keep the Regents Park Estate and Somers Town white!''

On the day of the march a hundred-strong force of BNP activists gathered on the Regents Park Estate with Union Flags and 'Rights for Whites' placards with a view to preventing any incursions into the estate by the communist mob.

By the time the march arrived, the 300 or so assorted immigrants and reds from every pathetic little organisation around nervously and hesitatingly crept along to face a hostile reception. Instead of putting the white community down, the reds were distinctly rattled by the presence of so many opponents. BNP members, joined by scores of locals, lined the road with flags flying, singing 'Rule Britannia' and chanting 'Rights for Whites'. Following this, the BNP paraded around the estate with loudhailers, spreading its message to the applause of local residents. A short victory rally was then held in the heart of the area.

Instead of these estates being subdued, the British National Party has given new confidence to the white community by this excellent activity. The main local newspaper, the Camden Journal, in covering the event concentrated wholly on the BNP activity and ignored the march.

The North London boroughs of Camden and Islington have become major growth areas for the British National Party in 1992. This event provided a very useful springboard for the BNP to establish itself firmly in these important estates. We should thank the 'Anti-Racist Alliance' for providing us with this opportunity!

ROCHDALE 'DAY OF ACTION'

British National Party activists held a highly successful 'Day of Action' in Rochdale, Lancs., on Saturday, May 2nd. The purpose of the event was to support the party's two candidates standing in the local government elections on May 7th. Over a hundred turned out. Apart from Lancashire activists, there were reinforcements from Yorkshire, the East Midlands, London and Scotland. Help from the latter two areas was especially appreciated as those involved had the furthest to travel. The picture here shows a part of the BNP team holding a demonstration outside Rochdale Town Hall, a building whose Victorian Gothic splendour contrasts vividly with the squalid little people inside who run the local council. In the elections Ken Henderson, standing in the Smallbridge & Wardleworth ward, obtained 112 votes (2.9 per-cent of the poll) and David Taylor, contesting the Balderstone ward, won 76 votes (2.7 per-cent).

Reading group gets off the ground

A British National Party unit has recently been formed in Reading, Berkshire. On Saturday, May 23rd, local BNP members staged a highly successful paper sale at a shopping precinct in the Caversham district.

Party activists showed the flag, distributed leaflets and sold British Nationalist. Interest in the BNP has been developing for some time in Reading, whose long-suffering townsfolk have had to endure for many years the rule of one of Britain's worst lunatic left-wing councils.

A clear groundswell of public support was reported by those taking part in the sale. Local interest in the BNP was reinforced as people took the leaflets and came to buy the paper. The activity also got a mention on local radio.

Reading BNP is shaping up to become a welcome addition to the party's strength.

Walter Rutter

WE have been very saddened to hear of the recent death of Mr. Walter Rutter of Hebburn-on-Tyne and a member of Tyneside BNP. He was 52.

Walter Rutter was active regularly with the party over many years, even when in poor health. Fellow members in his area always appreciated his excellent mind and knowledge, as well as his services as an activist, and to them his departure can only be regarded as a tragic one.

Walter Rutter was a studious man, one of whose great interests was classical music. He had a magnificent library, which will remain intact.

Walter Rutter had a mastery of the English language that some believed was unique, and this is perhaps one of the many reasons why he was never given an opportunity to express himself through the mass media.

Walter also devoted much of his time to a pursuit of his love for animals, especially dogs.

Our sympathies go out to his family and many friends in their loss.

Help ease the pressure!

PRESSURE on British National Party headquarters staff has increased considerably in recent months due to the expansion of the party's activities. One of the symptoms of this is that party officials cannot always answer letters with the promptness that might be expected by the senders. We ask all concerned to bear with us in this until staff can be expanded.

Post-Election Fund
£3,000 NEEDED!

READERS will not be surprised to know that the recent general election made heavy demands on the finances of the British National Party. The expenditure was most certainly worthwhile because the election campaign enabled the party to distribute, by one means or another, about three-quarters of a million pieces of literature all over the United Kingdom. It is now reaping the benefits in the way of enquiries and recruitment.

Nevertheless, the BNP has incurred some big printing bills to pay for this literature. Part of the bills is being paid by the regions that fought the election, but it was always understood that some contribution to these bills would have to come from party central funds.

It has now been possible to do a costing of what this contribution will have to be. It comes to just over £4,000. Of this sum, approximately £1,000 is left over from the original Election Fund when all other election costs have been met. This means that we have to raise £3,000 to underwrite the election printing bills.

This sum could be raised out of normal party income expected to come in during the next few weeks. However, if that income is allocated to meeting these debts it will heavily impoverish the party from the standpoint of its ability to finance new literature runs and other activities to back up coming campaigns aimed at capitalising on the widespread public interest the election campaign has generated.

We are therefore launching a 'Post-Election Fund', with a target of £3,000. We ask all readers and supporters to contribute generously to the achievement of this target. Please mark all donations 'Post-Election Fund' and send them to PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW. Receipts will be sent for all donations of £10 or over. Those requiring receipts for smaller donations please enclose written request and SAE.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the Common Market
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum possible self-sufficiency in food production.
- Rejection of both the poll tax and its substitute, the new 'property tax', and a return to the old rates system, though with fairer rebates allowing for differences in income and in the numbers occupying properties.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO, closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain, the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish Agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- Repeal of the laws permitting homosexuality and abortion (except where the latter is the result of rape or necessary on medical grounds), the wiping out of AIDS and a return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
